

Up a Tree

Debbie Davies was worried. She had taken her pet Rex for a little walk in her front yard in Swansea, Wales. However, Rex had wiggled his way out of his leash and climbed straight up a neighbor's tree. Now it was getting cold and dark outside.

Rex

Luckily, the rescuers Debbie had called for arrived quickly. The firefighters got Rex down from the tree. Then he was brought inside and given a bath. The warm water helped him recover from the cold outdoor temperature. Debbie breathed a sigh of relief. Her green iguana was back at home, safe and sound.

Debbie had taken Rex outside to find and collect dandelion leaves—a favorite iguana food.

A green iguana munching on some dandelion leaves